

Safe Shopping Guide

A Message from Attorney General Kwame Raoul

The holiday shopping season is well underway, and I am encouraging parents, grandparents, guardians and anyone who has children on their shopping list to review my office's annual Safe Shopping Guide to help avoid purchasing dangerous toys and children's products.

For more than 10 years, the Attorney General's office has issued an annual guide to help families learn about products that have been recalled over the past year so that they can avoid buying or can remove dangerous products from their homes. This year, the annual Safe Shopping Guide highlights 30 recalls issued by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission during 2019. Descriptions of the toys, furniture, children's clothing and other children's products are accompanied by photographs to make hazardous products easier to identify.

This year, I am urging families to be aware of recalls of certain infant incline sleepers and infant rocking sleepers that have been connected to infant deaths. The guide also includes other recalled children's items, such as children's clothing that does not meet flammability standards, toys and clothing with small pieces that can break off and pose a choking hazard, knit toys that have been found to contain needles, and infant and children's furniture that, if not properly secured, can result in falls and other injuries. By reading the guide, families can ensure they do not have these recalled items in their homes, and can avoid purchasing them through yard sales or secondhand websites where they may still be available.

If you have questions about products included in the guide, please call the Attorney General's Product Recall Hotline at 1-888-414-7678 (TTY: 1-800-964-3013). Current and previous editions of the Safe Shopping Guide can be found at http://www.illinoisattorneygeneral.gov/consumers/safe_shopping.html.

I wish all Illinois families a safe and healthy holiday season.
